Charity launches new scheme to help kids of Nepal

by JONATHAN KENT

As a resident can transfuse the life of a powerless, suffering child for less than the cost of a cup of coffee, a new scheme has been launched to help the children of Nepal.

The Kithmunchi Kids Club will use funds to help Nepalese children, many of whom have lost their parents and are destitute. The club's benefits will be health care and education.

The club's aims are to keep children out of danger and to ensure that all children attend school and are not excluded from the education system.

Nepal has been ravaged by civil war, and the club is working to help children who have been affected by the conflict. The club will work with the government to provide education and health care to children in need.

"The situation is very difficult," said a volunteer worker. "Children are living in poor conditions and are at risk of disease. The club aims to provide education and health care to these children."